PRE-ACTIVITY ON GLOBALIZATION

1.

- a. I checked my computer's history and it's such a coincidence to listen to exactly three music:
  1. Hard on Yourself by Charlie Puth and blackbear
    - i. Charlie Puth is from Rumson, New Jersey, U.S.
    - ii. Blackbear is from Daytona Beach, Florida
  2. Come Back Home by Lauv
    - i. Lauv is an underrated singer/songwriter from San Francisco, California
  3. In a Dream by Troye Sivan
    - i. Troye Sivan is from Johannesburg, South Africa
- b. Most of the time I listen through my PC because I usually use it specially for online class, my phone comes next if I'm out from home and my iPad would come last.
- c. Yes, the devices I use are made. Regarding my PC, there are plenty of origins because my pc is assembled when I bought it. I prefer buying it by parts so I know well the specs and it can reach my expectation. Specifically my PC's processor is Intel and it's headquarters is on Santa Clara, California founded by Gordon Moore and his best friend Robert Noyce. For it's operating system which is Windows it's origin is Redmond, Washington, United States founded by Bill Gates and again his best friend Paul Allen. I also use Mac because I believe it makes you more productive. So in terms of laptops, phones, and tablets I go for Mac and it's origin is 1 Apple Park Way, California, United States founded by Steve Jobs.
- d. Most of the time I use YouTube since I use PC more often, I also use Apple Music and Spotify but of course only for the trial because I am economical. I would use paid apps only when there is no other alternative.

2. Globalization for me is the world's connectiveness. To simply say, it's like a rich person who have most likely to have no limitations in going around the world. A launched device, music, food or even fashion would less likely to go around unless that country or place has restriction for such. And for this era, technology is constantly rising which makes almost everything easy to cross the borders.
